United States Judges McKenna, Morrow and Hawley, sitting as a Circuit Court of Appeals at San Francisco, have affirmed the judgment of the United States District Court of Southern California, dismissing the libel suit against the Chilian steamer Itata and releasing the vessel and 2,000 cases of rifles she had aboard when seized by the United States Marshal in San Diego harbor two years ago. There have been charges that restaurantkeepers at the fair placed such high prices on California wines that no one will call for them, as they can obtain foreign wines at almost the same price. Californians assert that restaurants at the grounds will not place any wines upon their lists unless a bonus of 12,000 to 15,000 is paid them. Califor-nians say this would exclude their wines. The population of Johnstown, Penn as they cannot afford to pay any such has increased over 6,000 since the flood sums. They propose therefore to estabish a cafe at the California building, in which all the wines of the California exhibitors will be fisted. New York, Ohio and other domestic winemakers will be given a show on the same cards. The ouncil of administration is asked to reduce the usual 25 per cent, turned in to stay indefinitely.

Going down town the other morning I spied just opposite a pretty little woman. No, indeed, he pushed his way into the seat between the couple, and after settling himself to his entire satisfaction, half turned his back upon the woman and drifted into a conversation with

Eating a Prickly Pear.

My first sad experience of the prickly pear was gained on a visit to the market place of Algiers. The fruit was handed to us, politely peeled, by the Arab dealer, and thus as we made acquaintance with its de-lightful coolness no suspicion of its evil qualities entered our minds.

A few days later, adding the excitement of a little tresspassing to the more legiti-mate pleasures of a country ramble, we came upon a well laden group of prickly pear bushes, and could not resist the temptation to help ourselves to some of the fruit. The result was woeful.

Mississippi Packets.

These Mississippi packets of the first and second class are very large boats, and roominess is the most striking characteristic of every part of them. They look light, frail and inflammable, and so they are. The upright posts that rise from the deck of such a boat, to support the saloon deck, are mere little sticks, and everything above them, except the funnels, is equally slender and thin. These boats are not like ours at any point of their makeup. They would seem to a man from the coast not to be the handiwork of shipbuilders-indeed there has been no apparent effort to imitate the massive beams, the peculiar "knees," the freely distributed "brightwork" of polished brass, the neat, solid joiner work or the thousand and one tricks of construction and ornament which distinguish the work of our coast boatbuilders. These river boats-and I include all the packets that come upon the Mississippi from its tributaries - are more like the work of carpenters and housebuilders. It is as if their model had been slowly developed from that of a barge to that of a house boat or barge with a roof over it-then as if a house for passengers had been built on top of the first roof, and the "Texas" and "bureau" had followed on the second roof.

-Julian Ralph in Harper's. Crocodiles in Water.

The crocodiles are thoroughly aquatic in their habits, and their peculiar conformation enables them to attack and seize their prey unawares. Their nostrils, which lead by a long canal to the back part of their throats, their eyes and their ears are placed on the upper part of the head, so that when in the water they can breathe, see and hear, while they are themselves practically invisible. When they dive their nostrils and ears are closed by lids or valves, and their eyes are covered by a transparent nictitating membrane. They are further furnished with an arrangement which prevents the water from getting down their own throats when they are holding large animals under the water to drown them.

The dentition of these reptiles is peculiar; the teeth are sharp and conical, and are hollow at the base, and each tooth serves as the sheath of another, which will in time replace it. The tongue-for, notwithstanding the ancient belief, the crocodile does possess a tongue—is fleshy and is attached to the bottom of the mouth. And finally the lower jaw is hinged at the very back of the skull, thus giving the animal its extraordinary gape and also the peculiar appearance which caused the notion that it moved its upper jaw.-London Saturday Review.
